Objectives

- Understand Stetson's conception of community-engaged learning
- Apply models and best practices for service learning into your syllabi
- Create new partnerships with nonprofit partners
- Articulate resources available to you through the Center for Community Engagement

Community-Engaged Learning

- Collaboration between institutions of higher education and their larger communities for the mutually beneficial exchange of knowledge and resources in a context of partnership and reciprocity.
- Encompasses both service learning and service theory
- Reflection occurs at every step in the process -
  - Pre-project, during, after, and at the end of the course

Liberating Service Learning (2016)

There is a change in perspective taking place, wherein community change is given more priority than satisfying classroom learning

Students will learn anyway

Community-Engaged Learning at Stetson

- Two types: service-learning and service-theory
  - Certificate of Community Engagement minor
- 2015 NASCE:
  - Faculty support:
    - 85% during development
    - 77% during the course
  - 92% would teach again

[If taught SL course] How many service-learning courses have you taught?

Models of Service Learning

Models 1 & 2: Limited, Optional, Supplemental

- Differ in their involvement with the class
  - Model 1: reflective paper, will not share with class
  - Model 2: will share to class their experiences
- Great for first-year seminars, 100- or 200- level classes
  - Annual Values Day

Model 3: Mandatory, Supplemental

- Students are required to serve a few hours per week with one partner
- Reflective paper required for the course
- Great for 100- or 200- level courses
  - EDUC 255: Educational Psychology
  - FSEM 100:
    - Global Citizenship
    - Diversity in the 21st Century Classroom
    - Us & Them - Human and Unhuman

Models 4 & 5: Mandatory, Integrated

• Differ in timing:

Model 4: Capstone project

- Last 3-4 weeks of course
- Students apply what they've learned to solve a community need

Model 5: Completely integrated throughout

- Purpose of the course is the project or issue area
- Community-based research
  - Needs assessment, data collection, final report to partner

- Best for 300- and 400- level courses, research

Examples:

- Social Marketing for Nonprofits
- Health Communications

Examples:

- Poverty and Microcredit
- Senior Project in Integrative Health Science
